1995 Alabama Collection Release

The President's Mansion is Collegiate Collectable's 1995 release for the Alabama Collection. This building, built in 1841, was one of only four campus buildings to survive when Union troops raided the University in April 1865 and stands today as a symbol of the University's heritage. This piece is a perfect complement to Collegiate Collectable's 1994 initial Alabama Collection release, Denny Chimes. The issue size of the President's Mansion is strictly limited to 5000 pieces.

Basketball Recruiting:

Bama Still Has Some Work To Do

by Kirk McNair

Football Signees:

Scholarship Limits Have Effect

Because of NCAA probation, Alabama could sign only 12 new football prospects in February. As a result, Alabama Head Coach Gene Stallings said the Tide had to recruit by need. Those needs appear to have been filled with a class short on quantity but high on quality.

Soccer & Volleyball Signees:

Football Isn't Only Recruiting Game

10

Although football draws most of the public attention when it comes to recruiting, all sports must find new players to sign. Alabama's women's soccer and volleyball teams also had February additions.

Spring Training:

Things Will Move More Quickly

Gene Stallings returns more starters than in any previous year as he looks ahead to the 1996 football season. Because of that, more emphasis will be placed on putting in the offense and the defense and aspects of the kicking game when spring drills get under way March 7.

Ozell Powell:

His Goal Is To Be Lighter, Stronger

16

As defensive tackle Ozell Powell prepares for spring training and his senior season in 1996, he knows that he must lose weight, increase his strength and get a little quicker. He has the experience of having plenty of playing time when he is in good shape.

Golf Outlook:

Juniors Provide Strength On Links

Both the men's and women's golf teams have good players who are underclassmen and both women's Coach Betty Palmer and men's Coach Dick Spybey are expecting good things this spring.

by Donna Fromme

Tennis Outlook:

There's A Building Process Going On

Alabama's women's team was strong last year, but suffered severe squad losses and has had to bring in talented newcomers. The men's squad, which was down in 1995, is rebuilding primarily with new players.

Dax Norris:

Leading Tide To Baseball's Next Level

24

Alabama senior catcher Dax Norris is the unofficial captain of the Crimson Tide baseball team. He was pleased with Alabama's success in 1995, but wants 1996 to be a year in which the Tide takes it one step further, to the College World Series.

Basketball Recruiting:

Bama Still Has Some Work To Do

by Kirk McNair

Tide men will add three or four in April signing period

Alabama basketball fans can already see the importance of replacing some key players next year. Part of the work was done in the early signing period when Crimson Tide Head Coach David Hobbs and his staff signed three players, all of them at least 6-9. That class was good enough to rank 14th in the nation as determined by Basketball Times.

However, the work is not finished.

The next signing period for basketball (and most other sports) begins in early April. Hobbs will have at least three and possibly four scholarships to give. Alabama has only 11 players on scholarship this year, two under the limit of 13. The Tide has four seniors to replace, and all of them—center Roy Rogers, point guard Marco Whitfield, guard Marvin Orange and forward Anthony Brown—have been key performers. (And prior to this season, how many people thought the key to recruiting in 1995-96 would be replacing Roy Rogers and Marco Whitfield?)

A fourth scholarship will be available for use this spring if center Wade Kaiser elects to give up basketball. Kaiser, who has one year of eligibility remaining, has already earned his undergraduate degree and is working on a master's degree in business administration. He has been unable to participate this year because of a recurring injury to his foot.

It is believed that Alabama's top priority for the spring is to add a point guard, since freshman Brian Williams will be the only point guard in the program after this season. The Tide is also looking for an inside scorer. Tide coaches are known to be involved with both high school and junior college players as the spring signing period approaches, and there is also the continuing rumor of Alabama having the inside track on a big man in Europe, with the top competition for him the European professional teams, not another American college.

Alabama's emphasis in recruiting has traditionally been in-state high school players. However, the cupboard has been somewhat bare in that area in recent years. Things have picked up the past two seasons in Alabama high school basketball and there are expected to once again be some major college prospects in the state next year.

The top in-state players available for signing this year appear to be a pair of forwards from defending state champion Montgomery Jeff Davis. The Tide's Williams was the catalyst of that team a year ago, but Jeff Davis has stayed in the thick of the state title race this year with a pair of 6-7 inside players, Rod Murray and Isaac Spencer. The biggest question with both is academics.

When Bama missed out on the state's top guard in the early signing period (Selma's Julius Robinson signing with Auburn), the search for a high school point guard apparently went very far. The only point guard whose name has been linked with Alabama for signing in the late period is Tony Parker, 6-2, from Rolling Heights, California. Parker, who ranks among the top 10 players in the nation at his position, is considering a number of schools, including Clemson, Seton Hall, New Orleans and Loyola Marymount.

Bama is also thought to be involved with a handful of prep forwards, including power forward Kris Hunter, 6-8, of Tallahassee (Florida) University High School; power forward Mario Bland, 6-7, 240, of Jackson (Mississippi) Callaway; and wing forward Shawn Marion, 6-6, of Clarksville, Tennessee. Bama is only vaguely mentioned with the top prospect in Canada, 6-10 power forward Jamar Magilioire of Toronto.

Junior college players have been very good to the Alabama basketball program in recent years, and the Tide is once again linked with some standout junior college performers.

Among the guard prospects is one in Alabama, Casey Green, 6-3, of Southern

Update On Signees

Alabama's December basketball signees have done very well in their final seasons before joining the Crimson Tide.

Jeremy Hays, the 6-10, 215-pound center and strong forward from Boaz, has led Coach Eric Dyer's team into the state playoffs. Hays has maintained the 23-points-per-game scoring average he carried as a junior at Boaz, while improving his rebounding mark to 14.3 per game and blocking 7.0 shots per game. He has hit 68 per cent of his field goals and 73 per cent of his free throws.

Alfred Moss, a 6-9, 215-pound center for Coach Harold Goodman at Newnan (Georgia) High School, led his team to a 21-6 record, including a school record 17-game winning streak. He averaged 17 points, 9 rebounds and 5 blocked shots per game and hit 85 per cent from the field and 78 per cent of his free throws.

Ricky Poole, a 6-9, 190-pound wing player for Coach Brad Franz at Otero Junior College in Union in Wadley. The Tide has also been mentioned with point guard George Wallace of Chaffey (California) and 6-1 Kerry Thompson of Tallahassee (Florida).

The most talked-about junior college player connected with Bama is forward Horatio Webster, 6-8, of Connors State in Oklahoma, considered the number one power forward prospect in junior college this year. There have been reports that Webster has committed to Alabama, but those are probably premature reports. He is considering a long list of schools, including Southeastern Conference members Auburn, Florida, Kentucky, LSU and Tennessee, as well as UNLV, Arizona State, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State.

Bama is also mentioned with the number one junior college center in the nation, Lorenzo Hall of Frank Phillips in Texas. Hall is also linked with Kentucky, Georgia, Seton Hall and Wake Forest.

A seemingly likely prospect for Alabama would be forward Donnie Johnson, 6-7, of Pearl River Junior College in Poplarville, Mississippi. Johnson is from Selma.

Other junior college prospects who have been linked to the Tide are power forward Demetrius Alexander of Hutchinson (Kansas), power forward Doug Beatty of New Mexico Junior College, and wing Rashad Tucker of Southeastern Junior College in Iowa.

It appears that Alabama is no longer involved with some prospects linked with the Tide prior to the early signing period, notably center Lester Earl of Baton Rouge, Louisiana; forward Patrick Ngongba from the Central Republic of Africa, who is playing at Calvert Hall in Endicott, Maryland; and junior college forward Rubin Patterson of Independence, Kansas, who has said he will return to his home state of Ohio, either at Ohio State or Cincinnati.

Colorado, has been everything his coach hoped he would be as a sophomore. "If there is a better wing player in junior college, I'd like to see him," Franz said. "He'll be at least an all-region player." Otero was to begin its league tournament in early March. Through regular season play Poole averaged 16.9 points and 7.0 rebounds per game as he hit 50 per cent of his field goal attempts and 76 per cent of his free throw tries. Franz added, "I've read a lot of stuff about the academic problems of some of the junior college transfers in the Southeastern Conference. You don't have to worry about Ricky. He had a 3.4 grade point average his freshman year and he had a 3.6 the first semester this year."

On the women's side, Alabama signee Nicole Carruth of Sulligent led her team into the state tournament. In the regional tournament she set a new Class 3A record for three-point shots made. She hit six treys en route to a 33-point scoring night in a 72-47 win over Mobile's UMS Wright in the first round of region play. She also had six rebounds, 11 assists and five steals in that game.

Football Signees:

Scholarship Limits Have Effect

by Stephen Craig

Bama had to recruit for need with only 12 grants

Because of an NCAA penalty, Alabama's football staff was recruiting with one hand tied behind its back this winter. After being able to sign only 14 players in 1995, the Tide was limited to only 12 this year. Next year Bama will be able to go after the full allotment of 25.

Despite the limit, Alabama actually signed 15 players this recruiting season. However, two of those did not count against the limit since they were December signees who were replacements for players lost to injury. Defensive end Michael Myers of Vicksburg, by way of Hinds (Mississippi) Junior College, is already enrolled after signing in December. Another December signee, Brenon Meadows, a transfer center from Louisville, has been with the Tide since last August. Alabama signed 13 rather than 12 to guard against the likelihood that one signee will not be academically eligible.

Primarily because of the limited number of scholarships Alabama could offer, the self-appointed recruiting experts are not giving the Tide high marks for this group. (Those same experts usually add that it is a second poor class for Alabama, although all indications are that last year's class of 14 was an excellent one.)

Regardless of the opinion of the recruiting experts, Alabama Head Coach Gene Stallings called the class "satisfactory." Out of necessity, Stallings had to abandon his usual philosophy of recruiting the best overall players available, opting for a revised version in which he attempted to fill positions according to need.

"We had to address need," Stallings said.

Jamie Carter

Paul Hogan

Adam Joiner

"Recruiting a limited number was very difficult. We left a lot of good football players on the table."

Alabama did not even attempt to sign a quarterback or a halfback because those are not immediate needs. The Tide's narrowed focus centered on the offensive and defensive lines, fullback, safety and receiver. From this class, Alabama finished with five offensive linemen, five defensive linemen, one wide receiver, one safety, one fullback, one tight end and a linebacker. Stallings and his staff feel confident in their decisions, and expect the majority of this class to make contributions this fall.

Here is a look at Alabama's signees:

Tim Bowens, wide receiver, 6-1, 195. Bowens is the only wide receiver prospect signed by Alabama. A good athlete that played both wide receiver and defensive back in high school, Bowens is slated on the offensive side of the ball for the Tide. He has 4.4 speed in the 40-yard dash, and caught 80 per cent of the passes thrown to him, despite that he often faced frequent double and triple coverage. Bowens earned all-state honors his junior and senior seasons and was a four-year starter at Brooks High School in Killen for Coach Tim Yeager. He helped Brooks to an 8-4 record and pushed them to the second round of the Class 4A state playoffs. Snagging 58 passes, Bowens recorded 810 yards receiving, scored 14 touchdowns and returned four punts for touchdowns. Defensively he was a play-maker, intercepting seven passes as a junior and senior, returning two for touchdowns. He also scored a pair of touchdowns on fake field goals and averaged 12 tackles per game. He picked Alabama over Auburn.

Jamie Carter, defensive lineman, 6-3, 290. Jamie, a four-year starter at Neshoba Central in Philadelphia, Mississippi, earned two years of all-state honors, along with prep All-America accolades following his senior season. He was Superprep's 23rd-ranked prospect in the South, and like many former Tide defensive linemen, Carter has great speed as a pass rusher, clocking in at 4.9 in the 40. He recorded 68 tackles and 12 sacks this past season, along with eight in his junior campaign. Also as a junior he tallied 55 solo tackles, 35 unassisted, and earned all-district and all-area honors. Coached by Terry Allen, Carter hails from the same high school as current Tide starter Will Friend. He selected Bama over Tennessee.

Paul Hogan, center, 6-3, 240. Hogan was a two-year starter and offensive captain for Coach Nick Hyder at Valdosta High School, playing both snapper and defensive end. As a senior he earned all-state honors, and was picked to play center for Georgia in the Florida-Georgia All-Star game. Hogan was an early commitment to Alabama, and chose the Tide over school such as Georgia, Georgia Tech and LSU. A Georgia Super 11 and Street & Smith Prep Senior to Watch, Hogan was also an all-region selection. A good athlete, Hogan also plays baseball.

Adam Joiner, tight end/offensive lineman, 6-3, 265. Playing for Coach Carl Madison at Milton (Florida) High, Joiner graded 90 percent as an offensive lineman. As a versatile athlete, Joiner also enjoyed success at tight end, catching 29 passes for 397 yards. At tight end, Joiner ranked in the top five nationally due to his ability to catch the ball but even better ability to block. A first-team all-state selection, Joiner also earned notice as a pre-season prep All-America and All-Northwest Florida honoree. Joiner helped Milton to a perfect 10-0 record and toward the playoffs, until a broken right foot ended his prep career. He selected Alabama over Florida and Notre Dame.

Jason Jones, safety, 5-11, 185. Tuscaloosa prep star Jason Jones could emerge as the sleeper of this class. An all-state selection from Central High School, Jones played on the 6A championship Falcon team, intercepting nine passes, four in one game, and returning one for a touchdown his senior campaign. Not listed by anyone as a player to watch, Jones was a big-play man for the Falcons, possessing that knack for being around the football. In his senior season Jones recorded 71 tackles, three fumble recoveries and nine pass break-ups. He was a Tuscaloosa News top 16 selection. Jones picked Bama over Houston, which recruited him as a running back.

Jason Jones

Dustin McClintock

Corey Kinnebrew, offensive lineman, 6-3, 280. The name itself carries potential for greatness. The son of former National Football League fullback Larry Kinnebrew, Corey only played one year of high school football, but still earned all-state honors for Rome High School and Coach Sam Pickett. Kinnebrew was used in short-yardage situations as a fullback, but is better on the line. Grading 85 percent on average, Corey had 22 knockdown blocks, while on defense recording 33 tackles, five pass break-ups, five caused fumbles and five fumble recoveries. Also a member of the Georgia team for the Florida-Georgia All-Star game, Kinnebrew's size and strength made him the state's top-ranked heavyweight wrestler. He is also an outstanding shot put and discuss man for the track and field team. He chose the Tide over Mississippi State.

Dustin McClintock, fullback, 6-3, 235. Dustin is a player who coaches hope will fill an immediate need, as weight gain has forced Reggie Grimes out of the fullback spot. Dustin was an all-area selection for three years, along with earning second team all-state honors in talent-rich Texas. McClintock was one of 33 players from Texas selected to play in the Texas-Oklahoma All-Star game, representing Ford

High School in Quinlan. A two-way player at tailback and linebacker for Coach Conley Bland, he rushed for more than 1,900 yards and 19 touchdowns as a senior (averaging 8.7 yards per carry), totaled 4,405 total career rushing yards. Defensively he also enjoyed success, recording 146 tackles during his senior season. He is also a top basketball and baseball player and throws the shot put and discus for the track and field team. Dustin chose Alabama over Purdue.

Brenon Meadows, center/guard, 6-1, 285. A two-year starter for Louisville at guard, Meadows may be recognized from his playing days at Birmingham's Berry High School. Meadows was a two-year starter for the Cardinals as a guard, and was an all-state and Super All-Metro lineman at Berry. Meadows was the state discus champion in high school, and sat out the 1995 season at Alabama as a transfer. As a member of the scout team he played both center and guard and is projected as a candidate at center.

Michael Myers, defensive end, 6-3, 270. A junior college All-America in 1994 and 1995, Myers recorded 63 tackles, eight sacks, five caused fumbles and three recoveries last season for Hinds Junior College. As a freshman at Hinds, Myers tallied 46 tackles and 20 sacks. Coached by Gene Murphy at Vicksburg (Mississippi) High School, he earned all-state and all-region honors and signed with Ole Miss out of high school. He picked Alabama over Tennessee and LSU in December.

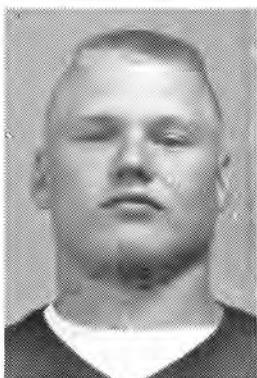

Heath Panks, defensive lineman, 6-4, 280.

Originally signed with LSU, this Parade All-America and all-state selection from Salmen High in Slidell, Louisiana, has superstar potential. As a junior and senior he earned first team all-state 4A and district MVP honors. In 1995 he had 94 tackles, 14 sacks, four fumble recoveries, one interception, four pass break-ups and three blocked punts. For his career, Panks boasts 163 tackles, 20 quarterback sacks, 27 tackles for losses and six fumble recoveries. Panks spent three years at Pearl River (Mississippi) Community College. He left LSU prior to the start of classes in 1993 and transferred to junior college. He was redshirted that year, played in 1994, then sat out again last season to concentrate on academics. He is expected to graduate this spring and be academically eligible. He had planned to go back to LSU following the 1994 season, but failed to graduate from Pearl River. Both his previous commitments to LSU went to then-Head Coach Curley Hallman, who was instrumental in luring Panks to Alabama this time around.

John "Griff" Redmill, defensive lineman, 6-6, 248. Another in-state selection, Redmill made the Tuscaloosa News Sweet 16 list and earned all-state honors this season. Redmill was busy last season, logging 44 solo tackles, 42 assists, four sacks, six pass break-ups and one fumble recovery. At season's end, Redmill benched 290, squatted 400 and was clocked at 4.9 in the 40. He also showed his athletic versatility by high jumping in track and was a member of the basketball team.

Griff Redmill

Kenny Smith

Kelvis White

Although Redmill underwent post-season knee surgery, he has been given a clean bill of health. Redmill's high school coach at Walker High School in Jasper was Bubba Davis. He selected Alabama over Ole Miss.

Kenny Smith, defensive lineman, 6-7, 260. The Atlanta Journal-Constitution listed Smith in its Top 25 prospects in the South, along with ranking number three on the Birmingham Post-Herald's Ten Most Wanted list, and he finished the season a first team all-state and All-America defensive lineman. A tremendous athlete, Kenny's quickness and strength enabled him to record 110 tackles, 52 for losses and 22 sacks, including five in one game, as a prep senior. He runs the 40-yard dash in 4.6 and benches 350 pounds. Smith also saw action at tight end for Coach Phillip Lolley at North Jackson in Stevenson, snagging 15 receptions for a 14-yards-per-catch average. He picked Alabama over Tennessee and Auburn.

Rob-E Staten, linebacker, 6-1, 250. Most of Staten's reputation comes from being a hard-hitting linebacker, as he recorded 137 tackles as a prep senior and more than 400 for his career. Staten was rated one of the Top 10 prospects in Mississippi by the Jackson Clarion Ledger. As a senior he earned all-state honors, showing versatility by also rushing for 1,545 yards and 15 touchdowns as a fullback. A powerlifter, Staten has bench pressed 435 pounds. His high school coach was Bruce Merchant, who says Staten has always wanted to wear the Crimson and White. "He's been wanting to play at Alabama so bad," Merchant said. "He's always wearing something with Alabama on it." Staten picked Bama over Mississippi State.

Gorman Thornton, tight end, 6-5, 250. Many wrote Thornton off as an Alabama signee, but the Birmingham News Player of the Year and the Alabama Sports Writers Association Mr. Football surprised the "experts" by inking with the Tide. Thornton snagged 24 passes for 360 yards and two touchdowns as a senior, adding to his 23 receptions and 438 yards and five touchdowns as a junior. Thornton is a good all-around athlete, playing a key role in Montgomery Jeff Davis' state basketball championship as a junior, as he teamed with current Tide standout Brian Williams. His brother is former Alabama and New York Giant lineman George Thornton. Thornton's high school coach was Charles Lee. Gorman picked Bama over Auburn.

Kelvis White, offensive lineman, 6-3, 265. White earned all-state honors in 1994 and 1995 at defensive line for Courtland, which won the state 1A championship in 1995. As a junior, he placed fifth at the state track meet in the shot put and third in the discus. A two-way starter for his coach and father, Louis White, Kelvis's brother Laron is a starting offensive guard for the Tide. White chose Alabama over Notre Dame, Memphis and Louisville.

Walk-Ons Will Boost Numbers

With a limited number of scholarships, Alabama is making a concentrated effort to attract walk-on football players this fall. Alabama Head Coach Gene Stallings said, "We have always had a large number of walk-ons who have contributed, and we have been appreciative of what they have meant to Alabama football. I suspect with the scholarship limits that a number of players are thinking the opportunity to walk on and play at Alabama is good right now."

In recapping Alabama's 1996 football recruiting, Stallings mentioned that a placekicker had been one consideration, but the Tide did not sign a placekicker. "Fortunately, I think that need has been addressed," Stallings said. Although he didn't name anyone, Stallings was almost certainly referring to Jonah Dismukes, a two-time all-state performer from St. Paul's Episcopal School in Mobile.

Dismukes, who also played tight end and kicker, was good on 12 of 14 field goal attempts in 1995. Five of those were over 40 yards with a long of 47 yards. As a junior he was good on eight of nine field goal attempts and as a sophomore hit all six of his attempts. He is his school's top soccer player. He has also attended the Ray Pelfrey Kicking School the past two summers, finishing first in distance and second in accuracy in camp competitions both years. Dismukes had originally planned to accept a scholarship offer at Northwestern.

There have also been published reports of two other highly-regarded players passing up scholarship opportunities in order to walk on at Alabama.

Ty Babcock, a 6-5, 265-pound center at Albertville, and Jahi Henley, a running back and defensive back at Hunter's Lane High School in Nashville, Tennessee, have said they will join the Crimson Tide in August.

Soccer & Volleyball Signees:

Football Isn't Only Recruiting Game

While attention is riveted on football recruiting in January, other fall sports are also recruiting. Alabama's soccer and volleyball teams also added performers on and after the February 7 national signing date.

Here is a look at the newest members of the Crimson Tide in those women's sports.

Defending champions don't rebuild. They reload. Such is the case with the Alabama women's soccer team, as the defending SEC Western Division champions completed the recruiting season by adding six signees to its already talented roster.

Here are the new signees for Coach Don Staley:

Nellie Barnes, 5-7, is the only non-freshman in the '96 class, coming South from the University of Minnesota. As a college freshman Barnes earned All-Big Ten honors. She is a stopper and midfielder.

Kathleen Foody, 5-4, is from Voorhees, New Jersey. A four-year starter for Camden Catholic, Foody scored 73 career goals and was a member of the Olympic Development Program U-16 and U-17 national teams. Foody also plays in the South Jersey Soccer League for a top program, the Medford Strikers. She is a striker.

Martha Mouring, 5-4, is from Spring, Texas. A member and captain of one of Texas' top club teams, Klein Challenge, Mouring was also a highly-rated member of the South Texas ODP state team for three years. Mouring was a member of two championship teams with the Challenge and earned all-district honors as a freshman for Klein Oak High School. Ironically, both of her parents are graduates of Auburn. She is a midfielder and defender.

Laura Reddin, 5-6, is from Germantown, Tennessee. As a junior, Reddin played on the state championship team for Germantown High School and was selected to the all-state team in 1994. Other honors include all-metro (1993-94), all-region (1994), All-Metro Best of Preps (1993-95) and all-tournament in both the regional and state tournaments. She currently plays club soccer with the '78 Memphis Futbol Club, which has won five consecutive state championships. She is a midfielder and defender.

Tracey Timmerman, 5-3, is from San Antonio, Texas. As a co-captain of her Tom C. Clark High School team, Timmerman has earned spots on all-city, all-district and all-region teams. Experienced with the ODP, she was a member of the '78 Area Team (1993-95) and '78 State Team (1994-95). Other honors for Timmerman include membership on the Lanzera National Select Women's Team and the 1995 Lanzera National Select European Tour. She is a striker and midfielder.

Carrie Warner, 5-6, is from Columbia, South Carolina. A talented prep goalkeeper, Warner's presence will provide stability in the nets to back-up all-conference keeper Amy Pseja. Warner is a good athlete who will have earned six varsity letters by graduation, and has led her U-19 club team, Trident United, to three consecutive state championships. Warner has started in goal since seventh grade for a team that consistently makes the playoffs, and has garnered numerous honors including: all-state (1995), all-region selection (1993-96), all-area (1995), and member of the South Carolina Select Team (1995-96)

Coach Dorothy Franco-Reed has added three new performers to the Crimson Tide volleyball squad. They are:

Amy Foytik is a 5-10 outside hitter who has spent the past two seasons being coached by Steve Houghton at Kankakee (Illinois) Junior College, where she was a Volleyball magazine third team All-America. She was a two-time all-conference performer as a high school player at St. Charles, Illinois and earned all-state honors as a senior, when she was selected to the Chicago Sun-Times all-star team.

Laura LeBlanc is a 5-11 outside hitter from Lafayette (Louisiana) High School, where she was a teammate of current Tide Lisa Bordes. Her high school squad, coached by Ursela Quoyeser, reached the state quarter-finals the past two years after reaching the semi-finals in 1993.

She was named to both the athletic and academic all-state teams as a senior. She was also named Acadia Most Valuable Player. She was also her most valuable player in basketball and in field for her track and field squad. She is a member of the National Honor Society and recipient of a National Merit Scholarship.

Monica Morales is a 6-0 left side hitter from Colegio Sagrados Corazones High School in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, where she was coached by Juan Carlos Gonzales. She has played volleyball since age 10 and was a member of the Puerto Rico National Team for youths under 17 in 1993, 1994 and 1995. In 1995 she was selected for the North-South Club All-Star Games and made the Puerto Rico National team. She has twice been named MVP in her league and was selected for all-star teams in 10 tournaments, earning MVP in seven of them.

1996 Football Depth Chart By Class

Here is a depth chart by class of those who are scheduled to be on Alabama's football roster in 1996. It is important to remember that this is not a true depth chart. It should also be noted that spring training may result in some position changes, and that the positions of incoming freshmen are in some cases merely educated guesses. Most walk-ons are not included.

Spring Training:

Things Will Move More Quickly

by Kirk McNair

This will be Stallings' most experienced returning team

Gene Stallings is going to take a little different approach to football practice when spring training gets underway March 7. The Alabama head coach has re-structured his football staff, but that doesn't mean there are going to be a number of changes. However, the fact that Stallings will have most starters and a number of key back-up performers returning from 1995 means that Stallings and his coaches can move things along a little more quickly.

"The first few days I want the players jockeying for positions," Stallings said. "In the first half of spring training I'm going to try to find out who the best two players are at each position. The second part of spring practice I'm going to do everything that I can to put in our offense and defense and some phase of our kicking game, which I haven't done before."

In Stallings' previous spring drills the emphasis has been on fundamentals and on identifying the top two men at each position. With so many top players returning from last year, Stallings believes the identification process can be much quicker. Bama has never had more than 15 starters returning. This year the Tide has eight regular starters back on offense and nine regular starters back on defense. The Tide has 59 lettermen returning.

Plans call for Alabama to have eight of its 15 practices (and six of the ten full gear practices) prior to spring break beginning March 22. At that time Stallings expects that identification process to be completed. Practice resumes April 3 and concludes April 13, tentatively with an A-Day Game. There is a chance there will not be a spring game because of work going on at Bryant-Denny Stadium. Because of squad reductions, which make it very difficult to have two complete teams, coaches consider a spring game a wasted practice, but the tradition has continued for the sake of the fans.

Stallings said the general philosophy of the Crimson Tide would not change, even though there are new offensive and defensive coordinators. "We'll probably have a change or two, but nothing dramatic," he said. Assistant Head Coach Woody McCorvey, who has coached Bama's wide receivers the past six years, will be offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach. His replacement as receivers coach is Dabo Swinney, elevated from graduate assistant status after an impressive job as coach of Alabama's scout team receivers the past two years. On defense, Mike Dubose is the new coordinator and Curley Hallman has taken over as coach of the secondary.

Hallman will also take over much of the responsibility for the overall kicking game. Stallings said the Tide will have more work in this area in the spring than has been the case in the past. Stallings is particularly determined to improve coverage, although most of the interest in the kicking game will center on who replaces Michael Proctor as placekicker.

If there is one thing to watch for as Alabama works on its overall strategy it is likely to be the offensive passing game. The Tide will still be ground-oriented, but the air attack is expected to feature a downfield passing game as opposed to the short passing assault.

Spring is traditionally the time for experimentation, and Stallings said there would be some of that. It has already been announced that Reggie Grimes is moving from fullback to defensive end. That's not so much a strategy decision as it is a result of Grimes' work in the weight room. Stallings noted that Grimes was big for a fullback when he arrived at Alabama, 6-4 and 240. Half a year on the training table and in the weight room has pushed Grimes to the 278-pound mark. The head coach said there would probably be a few other moves, particularly in the first half of spring training, and mentioned the possibility of Matt Harrison, a back-up center, getting a look on the defensive line.

At least three players coming back from injuries are questionable for spring training. Wide receiver Calvin Hall has had a series of foot injuries, the latest coming last fall. Linebacker Tito Smith and walk-on defensive tackle Shawn Alexander are both coming off early fall knee surgery.

Stallings said he expects one advantage the Tide will have in spring training is a stronger team, owing to a more productive off-season program this winter.

Alabama returns nine players on offense who had starts last year, while 10 who started at one time or another return on defense. And while Proctor is gone from the special teams, Bama returns punter Hayden Stockton, snappers for both punts and placement, and holder Lance Tucker. The kick return specialists are also back.

One of those returning starters on defense will not take part in spring training. Outside linebacker Ralph Staten, who was suspended for one game last fall for a violation of team rules, was suspended for the spring for violation of another team rule this winter. Staten will have an opportunity to re-join the team in August.

If there is one aspect of the offense that has been most questioned in recent years it is the play of the line. Stallings has promised, "You will see improvement in the offensive line this spring." He said that's for two reasons: One, only guard Maurice Belser who had a great deal of playing time last year, has graduated; Two, there are some young players who are going to challenge.

The returning starters are Joel Holliday at left tackle, Will Friend at left guard, John Causey at center, Laron White at right guard and Pete Dimario at right tackle. Sage Spree saw plenty of playing time behind Holliday, but otherwise there is not significant experience returning. Right guard Jeremy Pennington and center Michael Ray saw a little action, right tackle Chris Jordan not as much, among offensive line lettermen returning. Guards Chris Sign, Josh Swords and Rhett Crutchfield also return.

Dennis Riddle was Bama's top rusher in 1995, but he has plenty of competition for the starting job at halfback as Bama prepares for spring practice.

However, Brenon Meadows, who performed with the scout team while sitting out his transfer year from Louisville, along with redshirt freshmen Jason McDonald and Chris Samuels, both tackles, and Mookie Moore are expected to add good depth. Meadows and Moore are both listed as centers, but one could move to guard.

Although the starting tight end, Tony Johnson, has graduated, Alabama is in great shape with Patrick Hape and Rod Rutledge returning. Both have had plenty of playing time, though few receptions. Last year Hape had four catches for 48 yards, Rutledge one reception for eight yards. There is a chance that redshirt freshman Clint Waggoner, a defensive end on the scout team last year (and a perfect 4.0 in the classroom), could get a look at tight end.

If there is an area of major concern on offense it is the wide receivers. Three of the four regulars in last year's rotation are gone. Toderick Malone, Curtis Brown and Chad Key have graduated, leaving only flanker Marcell West with meaningful playing time. One of Bama's brightest prospects is flanker Michael Vaughn, although Vaughn was used primarily as a punt return man last year. If West isn't the fastest man on the Alabama team, it may be that walk-on flanker Chad Goss is.

Calvin Hall was on the verge of moving into the regular rotation at split end when he suffered a broken foot last fall. Michael Feagin got most of his playing time as a kickoff return man, but he'll probably be number one at split end when practice begins. Shamari Buchanan, a redshirt freshman, was hurt part of last fall and was not a major force with the scout team at split end. Most of the receivers have had some work with Swinney.

Bama is very strong at halfback and quarterback, but fullback doesn't have a great deal of depth going into spring training.

Dennis Riddle took over as the starter at halfback last year and will be number one as spring work begins, but there is talented depth at the primary running back spot. Brian Steger has started and Curtis Alexander and Montoya Madden have some experience. Newcomer Shaun Alexander was very impressive on the scout team last fall.

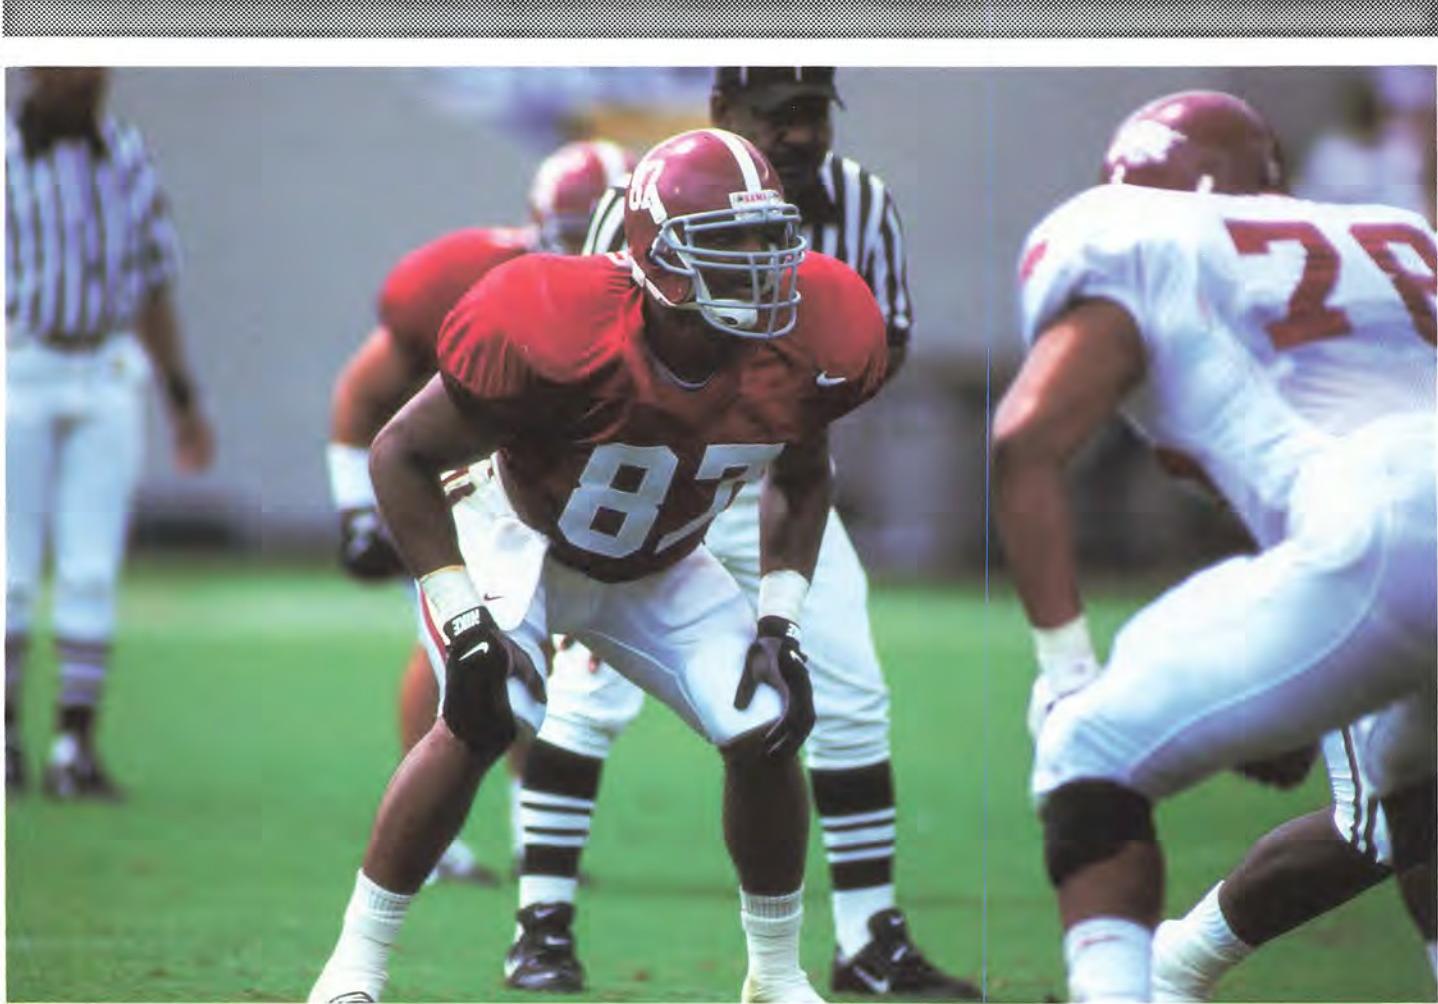

Freddie Kitchens took over the starting job as quarterback late last year and returns for his junior season as the established number one man. Lance Tucker is listed as a quarterback, but will probably not figure heavily into the competition. The battle for number two should be a good one with Warren Foust, who was number three last year after serving as scout team quarterback in 1994, and John David Phillips, who ran the scout team last fall.

Ed Scissum returns as starting fullback, but there is virtually no experience behind him. Trevis Smith, a converted linebacker, is the number two fullback. There is the possibility that Madden could work at fullback. He's small (5-9, 205), but capable.

There is no question that Alabama suffered meaningful graduation losses on the defensive line, but there is still a good deal of experience returning. Bama could easily put four men who have started on the defensive front. End is very strong, whereas tackle doesn't have as many experienced players.

Chris Hood showed flashes of greatness at left end last year. Although there has been some talk of Hood getting a look at tackle, he'll start out number one at end, ahead of Anthony Dowdell and Edgar Walker. Darrell Blackburn is a pass rushing specialist from his right end position. Kelvin Moore, who has also started, is behind him, and Moore is also Dwayne Rudd was Alabama's leading tackler in 1995 and he's back to man an outside linebacker position. The Tide returns a number of top performers.

capable of playing tackle. And there's a meaningful new name to throw into the mix at defensive end: Michael Myers was considered by many to be the number one defensive line prospect coming out of junior college this year. Additionally, former fullback Grimes joins the defensive line, probably at end.

The starting tackles, Ozell Powell on the left side and Eric Kerley on the right, were part-time starters last year. However, there is little experience behind them with walk-ons Chris Warren and Shawn Alexander listed as top reserves with the possibility that Matt Harrison will join the group from center on the offensive front.

Strongside Ralph Staten being off the squad this spring is not insignificant, but the linebacker corps is still a deep and talented outfit. Paul Pickett missed last fall with back surgery, but is expected back this spring. John Tanks also has experience at the strongside linebacker position and Eddie Hunter is in the mix.

Weakside linebacker Dwayne Rudd will be a candidate for the Butkus Award as the nation's top linebacker. There is also experience behind him in Steve Harris and Lamont Floyd. Tito Smith is expected to be at weak-side linebacker if he is back from his injury.

John Walters has graduated at middle linebacker, but the Tide has two experienced back-up players returning in Fernando Davis and Tyrell Buckner, both seniors. Chris Edwards, Granison Wagstaff and Franz Odom are also listed at middle linebacker.

Alabama had to just about rebuild the secondary last year, but this year the Tide returns four starters (all of them potential all-stars) and several experienced back-up performers. There should not be a great deal of change in techniques under Hallman.

Right cornerback Deshea Townsend had a poor first half of last season as a tackler, but overall had an excellent season. He's backed by Owen Winston, who had most of his playing time on special teams, and redshirt freshman Thomas Hill. Fernando Bryant was very impressive as a true freshman starting at left cornerback. A pair of senior walk-ons, Tracy High and Marlon Reyes, are listed as top back-ups.

Kevin Jackson took over as starting strong safety midway through last season and was a big play performer. Andre Short is a solid performer behind Jackson.

Free safety has the most depth, although a couple of those are candidates at other spots. Cedric Samuel returns as the starter with Steve Stanley likely to be top back-up. Jeremy Pruitt, who is listed as a free safety, is also able to play strong safety, while Kelvin Sigler could be either a safety or a cornerback.

While kick coverage has been cited by Stallings as an area of special teams that will get attention in the spring, Tide coaches will also be judging the placekickers.

Kickoff man William Watts has never attempted a field goal or extra point in a game. He's got a strong leg, but his nickname—"Wild Thing"—is probably a tipoff to a concern Stallings might have to Watts as the placekicker. Three walk-on players have been mentioned in pre-spring talk. They are redshirt freshmen Ryan Pflugner and Daniel Elder and junior Tom Covelli.

Ozell Powell:

His Goal Is To Be Lighter And Stronger

by Donald F. Staffo

Senior plans to be leader as well as starter for Tide

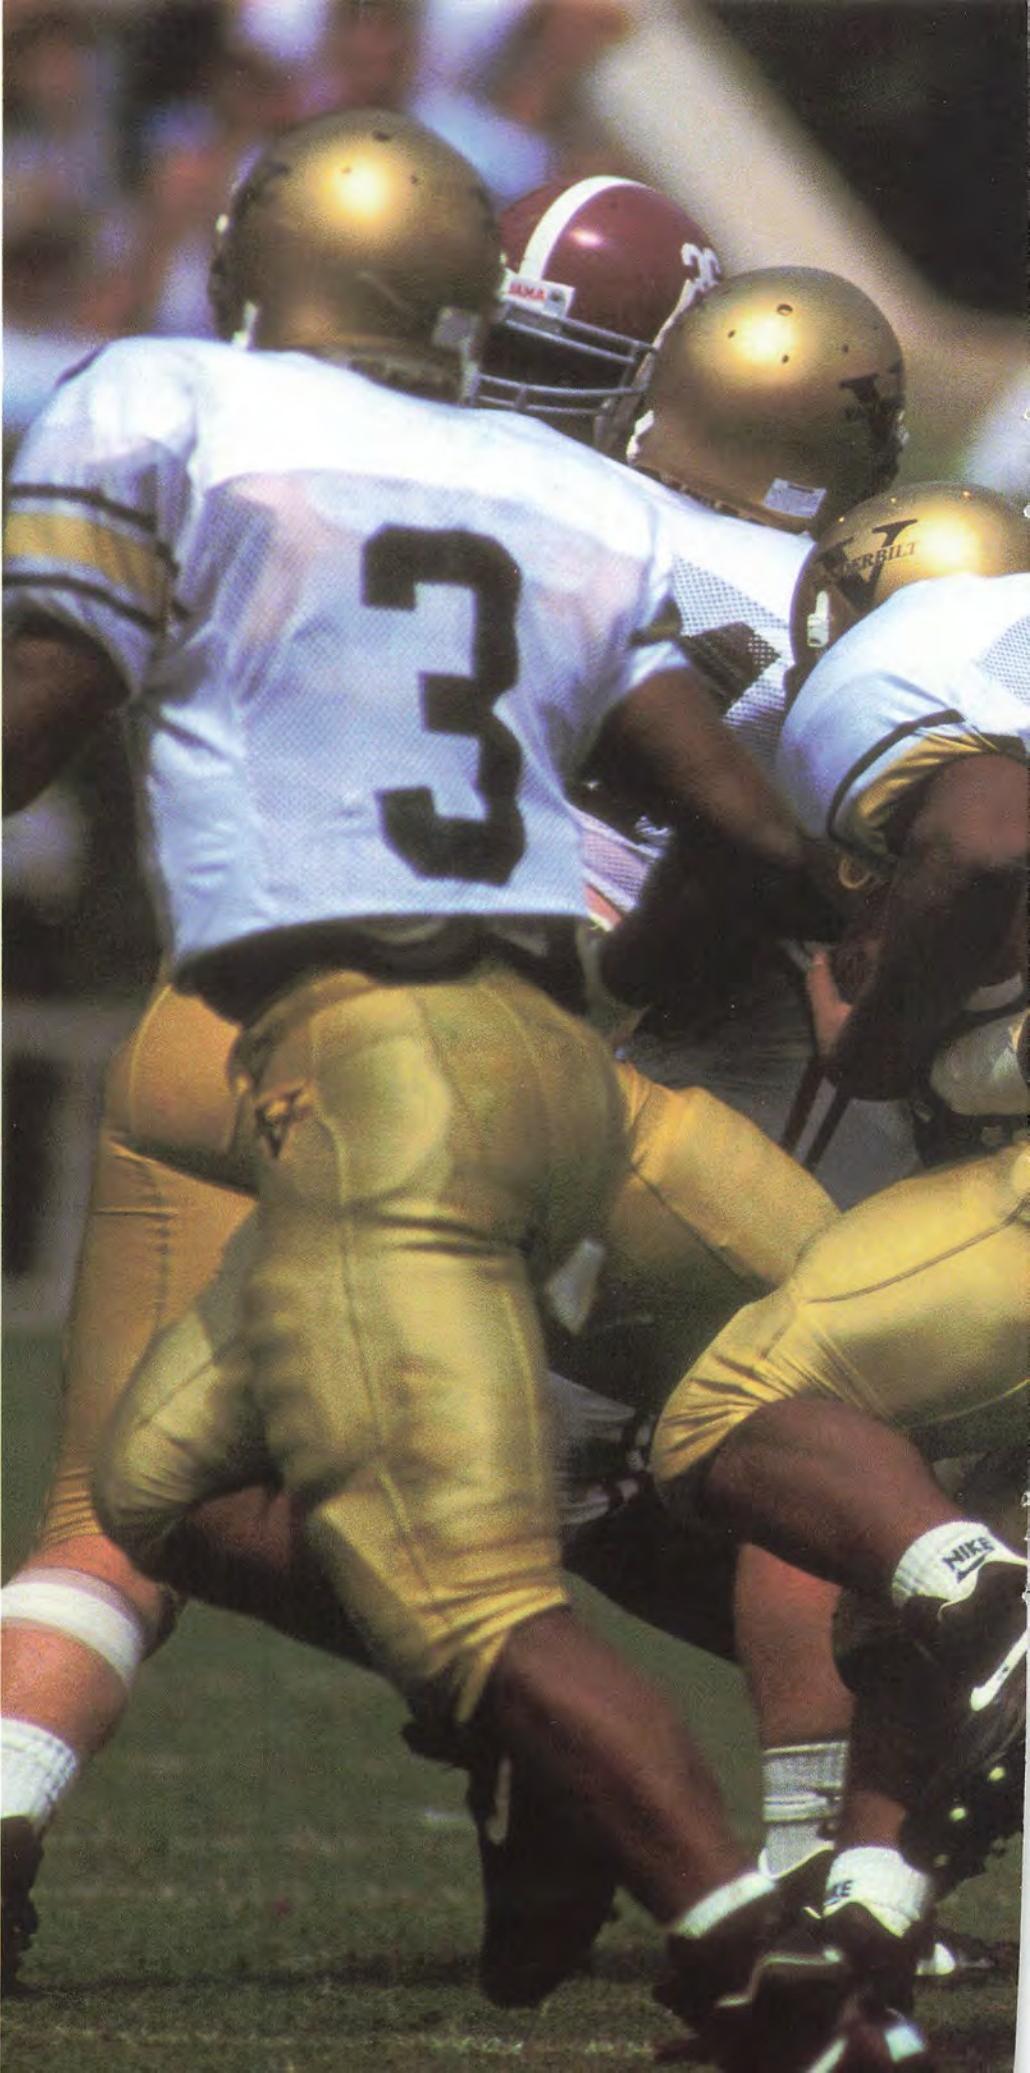

Bigger is not necessarily better, at least not for Alabama defensive tackle Ozell Powell. Powell, an upcoming senior, is one of the Super-Huge members of the Alabama football team. At 6-5 and 305 he may be the biggest, but the other 300-pounders—Eric Kerley, Bryan Thornton and Joel Holliday among them—are always within a meal or so of the top spot.

Unfortunately, these are not members of a sumo wrestling team, and in football there's more to being good than being big even in an era of the 300-pound lineman being commonplace. And Powell readily acknowledges that excess baggage he has carried around since he arrived at The Capstone in 1992 has hindered his progress. After being redshirted that first year, he started five games as a freshman in 1993 and five as a sophomore in 1994. Last year he expected to be a fixture in the defensive line. However, while he played in all 11 games, he started only four and was credited with only 15 tackles and a forced fumble. Those are hardly the numbers of the impact player Powell hoped to be by his junior year.

"I am really disappointed in myself because I didn't do all the right things it took and that I needed to do to make myself better," Powell said. "I didn't control my weight, I didn't get stronger, and I wasn't in the kind of shape that I needed to be in. If I take care of my weight, I can solve some of these other problems."

When he didn't start last year, Powell played behind Shannon Brown. Powell got about a third of the snaps in the early season, but by the end of the year he was getting about an equal amount of playing time with Brown. Heading into his senior season, Powell said he plans to be a full-fledged starter.

"I want to make up for the past," Powell said. "I want to get recognition from the pro scouts. I want to show them that I can play so that I have a better chance of getting to the next level. If I can have a good year and get people to notice me, some of the other things will come."

With Shannon Brown, Matt Parker, Kendrick Burton, Elverett Brown and Vann Bodden having all graduated off the defensive line, Powell will open spring training as the number one man at left defensive tackle. And he has shown in off-season work that he is taking his opportunity seriously.

Although he is still 25 pounds above what Assistant Coach Mike Dubose believes is Powell's ideal playing weight, Dubose said, "I'm not as concerned with body weight as I am with percentage of body fat, and that's not just for Ozie, but for all the players. I want Ozie to be as big and strong as possible, but it's got to be the right ratio of muscle to body fat."

To that end, Powell has put in hard hours in the off season. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays he has done heavy lifting and distance running. On Tuesdays and Thursdays he does lighter lifting and spring work. He also exercises on a Stairmaster machine for 20 to 30 minutes each morning. And, he added, "Sometimes when I have extra energy, I'll walk at night."

Powell isn't getting any extra energy in the Bryant Hall dining room. "They've got me on a diet plate," he said. "No cake or anything like that."

Dubose recognizes a distinct change in Powell's attitude. "Ozie hasn't missed a workout yet, and that's something he couldn't say the last three years," Dubose said. "He recognizes what he has not done and what he needs to do, and that's encouraging to me."

Ozell Powell reported prior to the start of the 1995 football season at 315 pounds. By mid-year he had dropped down to 285 and his playing time increased significantly. Although he is over 300 as spring training approaches, Powell intends to be at 280 when the 1996 season begins.

"When Ozie first came here I thought he could be as good as (former Tide star) John Copeland, and I know that's saying a lot. And it's still not too late for Ozie to get to that level. If he keeps up his work ethic, I still think he can be the kind of player that I expect him to be, that he expects to be and that a lot of others expect him to be."

To that end, Powell wants to get lighter, faster and stronger. He currently bench presses 315 pounds and squats 400 while running the 40-yard dash in 5.2 seconds. "I know I've got to get a lot stronger for my size," Powell said. "Although my speed and quickness are adequate, that will improve if I lose weight."

Powell has made some progress. When he reported last fall he tipped the scales at 315 pounds. It's significant that his playing time didn't increase until his poundage had decreased. By mid-season he had trimmed down to 285. "That's when I was playing my best," Powell said. He has since let his weight balloon back over the 300-pound mark, but intends to be at 280 when the 1996 season begins.

Powell came to Alabama after earning first team all-state honors at Greenville High School, where he turned in an average a sack a game his junior and senior years under Coach Gene Allen. Powell was also a tight end on offense with 10 receptions for 120 yards as a junior, but his days of offense ended when he arrived at Alabama. In addition to being a four-year starter in football, Powell averaged 10 points per game and was the leading rebounder on the basketball team and was 5A state champion in the shot put.

Powell picked Alabama after considering Auburn, Florida, Tennessee and Southern Mississippi. "I grew up watching Alabama on television," Powell said. "It was one of my dreams to play for Alabama." Although Auburn offered a scholarship, Powell said he would have played for the Tigers only if Alabama had not recruited him.

(However, that didn't stop Powell's cousin, Ezell, a 6-6, 275-pound defensive lineman at Georgiana, from signing with Auburn in February. "I talked to him a couple of times about coming to Alabama," Ozell said. "I don't know why he went to Auburn, but I'll talk to him later and find out. There's nothing I can do about it now except wish him good luck and tell him not to be mad after we beat them. Knowing what I know about Coach Dubose, I think it could have made him a better player if he had come to Alabama.") national championship season. As a red-shirt freshman in 1993 he played in every game and was a starter in five of them, including the Southeastern Conference Championship Game against Florida. He missed two games with injuries as a sophomore, but still had plenty of playing time and a handful of starts.

As he approaches spring training and preparation for the 1996 season, Powell is determined to be a starter and a leader for the Tide. "I've got to be more of a leader this year, a positive role model for the younger guys," Powell said. "I think Coach Dubose is going to look for the four seniors on the defensive line—me, Darrell Blackburn, Kelvin Moore and Anthony Dowdell—to be the leaders."

Powell believes that one of his strengths is his ability to quickly recognize offensive schemes and react to them. He said he also thinks he does a good job against the run. However, he said he knows he's got to improve his play in passing situations. And, most of all, he knows he's got to lose some weight.

Juniors Provide Strength On Links

by Donna Fromme

Men and women teams both have number of top underclassmen

Leaders come in all sizes, and, fortunately, for both Alabama head golf coaches, in all ages. Both the Crimson Tide men's and women's golf teams are laden with underclassmen, a situation both teams hope to use to their advantage. Juniors predominate on both squads.

For Women's Coach Betty Palmer, the power is found in a blonde Swede, junior Johanna Swärd, her top performer from 1995. "Johanna has emerged as a leader on the golf course," Palmer said. "Johanna played well and finished among the top 20 in three tournaments during the fall, and she's ranked in the top 100 in the national rankings. I don't see anything but her moving in the same direction this spring. She's worked very hard to get where she is. She knows she has to put together the lowest scores possible to climb in the rankings and to put our team among the top five finishers at every tournament. She's been very consistent for us so far, so I don't see her letting up now."

The women's team kept the same mix of five all fall and heads into the spring with its hopes resting on that same quintet which improved with every event.

"We saw some good performances from all five players," Palmer said. "And we have a sixth, (soph) Kelly Milligan, who has been on the edge of qualifying all year. I hope to see her playing this spring. It's a good situation to be in because they all appear to be focused on playing well and you're seeing that every week."

"Julie Pelchar (a sophomore) has matured a great deal on the course. She's made great strides in being able to produce different shots and making herself a more multi-dimensional player. Rachel Short is a freshman who's been a wonderful addition to our program. She's a well-rounded athlete who has the heart and desire to go out

The success of the Alabama golf teams in 1996 will depend in part on Julie Pelchar for the women and Chip Deason for the men.

there and play very competitive golf. Theres Svedin (freshman) had a hole-in-one in the middle of tournament play this fall, so she's out there working hard with some of our better rounds, and Linda Sorensen (freshman) is showing promise.

This team knows that they have to put the lowest scores possible up and finish in the top five as a team to get to the regional (NCAA Regional Tournament). That's the challenge for them this year." In order to qualify for the regional tournament, which is at Auburn, Palmer believes the Tide must finish in the top five in every tournament this spring. "Once you get to the regional you have a clean slate," Palmer said. "You erase where you finished in the fall and spring. It only matters what you do for the next three days. Do well there and you make the NCAA field. It's an attainable goal, but each of our players has to meet the challenge."

The Alabama women opened play in the fall with a fourth place finish at Auburn, then followed with "bottom-middle" of the pack finishes in three other fall events. Spring season opens March 1-3 in the Lady Gator at Gainesville, Florida.

After the four fall events Swärd shaved two strokes from her 1995 scores, down to 77.3. Pelchar has put in the second best numbers at 79.8, followed by Svedin at 79.9, Short 81.3 and Sorensen 81.7.

Dick Spybey compares his Tide men's team fall season to a roller coaster ride as Alabama's play dipped from peaks to valleys and rose again. It opened with a top six finish, tumbled to the bottom at midpoint, then moved back up again at the end. It was a fall where at least three of his golfers emerged as steady forces on the course. But it was the elusive fourth counting score that sent the Tide off track more than once.

"I think the key to success this spring is that our top three players, Chip Deason, Patrick Vadden and Allan MacDonald, need to go ahead and step up one more level," Spybey said. "All three at times in the fall showed great promise at an all-conference and/or an All-America level. Now we've got to get them all to be on the same page every week."

"If those guys will step up a level and we provide a more consistent level from our four and five people, then we have a chance to be real good."

Being "real good" is an especially compelling goal as Alabama heads into the thick of its schedule, the spring season. (In collegiate golf, the season is a year long. It begins in the fall, breaks for the play-unfriendly months of December and January, then picks up again in mid-February. All events count equally when post-season selections are made.)

The Tide will have hosted three tournaments by season's end: the first in Birmingham at Shoal Creek, where Bama was host of the Jerry Pate National Collegiate in October; March 22-24 at Montgomery's Lagoon Park for the Blue-Gray Southeastern Invitational; and May 10-12 when the Crimson Tide will host the Southeastern Conference Championships at Old Overton in Birmingham.

And Spybey's three aces appear ready for the challenge. Deason, a junior, has picked up where he left off last season and is bettering that. In 1995 he capped his sophomore year with a fourth place finish at the SEC Championships. He finished in the top 11 in two of Alabama's four fall events, producing finishes and scores that propelled him into the top 100 national rankings individually. His fellow junior, Vadden, joins him in those ranks as he began the spring ranked number 37 in the nation. Vadden's year includes a seventh place finish at the Red River Classic in Dallas last fall. And MacDonald jumped right into the picture in Division I competition after transferring from junior college. He had three top 22 finishes in the Tide's five fall tournaments.

"As I recruited last year I tried to find someone who could help this group come together, to be the glue to this puzzle," Spybey said. "I really think I found that in Allan. He's an extremely disciplined player and a very good leader as well as being a top junior college performer when he came in."

Bama opened the spring season in February at Florida's Gator Invitational with all three finishing in the top 20, Deason 15th, MacDonald 17th and Vadden 20th. Each produced one excellent round, Deason with a 65 midway through the tournament, Vadden finishing with a 66, and MacDonald closing with a 68. As a team, Alabama was seventh of 15 in a strong field.

"I hope this will create a lot of confidence in our group," Spybey said.

Spybey has redshirted Tuscaloosa native Mayson Petty this year. Petty, a United States Amateur participant last summer, had been among the Tide's playing five for the previous three seasons. But going into his senior year, Petty, the 1994 SEC Long Drive Champion, was feeling burnout and requested the redshirt.

Mobile's Brian Wright, the 1992 and 1994 Alabama High School champion, has been playing the most at the four spot for the Tide. He was inserted into Alabama's lineup as a freshman last year and helped Alabama to a fourth place SEC finish.

Also trying for the four and five spots are senior Dan Mutert; redshirt freshman John Stahlschmidt, who had his best collegiate round at the Gator Invitational when he had a 71 in the final round; redshirt freshman Robert Ireland; and junior transfer Matt Clark. Freshman Chip Zahn, the Louisiana High School champion, was held out of fall play and is expected to be redshirted.

Tennis Outlook:

There's A Building Process Going On

by Donna Fromme

Women's team has to replenish lost stars from strong team, while men are still climbing

Both Alabama tennis coaches, Jim Tressler for the women and Joey Rivé for the men, are becoming first time fathers this year. Tressler's son was born in January. Rivé's baby is due in March.

That is a stage in their personal lives that is mirrored to a degree in their professional lives. Both of their teams are also experiencing a re-birthing. Tressler has replenished from a mass exodus of his successful 1995 squad. Rivé is breathing life into a program that skidded upon the depths of frustration last season.

And as they sail into the spring season, both coaches have already emerged as worthy figureheads. Rivé has produced a Southeastern Conference champion. Tressler's charges as well have brought home tournament hardware and debuted for the season at number 21 in the nation.

For Tressler and the Alabama women, the challenge is to not only maintain the 1995 success but to better it. The women rocketed to a program best number 10 national ranking last season, broke three players into the national individual rankings—two of those in the top 30—and also to put together a nationally ranked doubles duo.

But the nest was near-empty when the 1994-95 season ended. Three of Tressler's top six graduated. A fourth, the team's most valuable player, returned to her home country, Holland, to pursue a pharmacy degree and career.

"Last year we had four of our top six in their final year," Tressler said. "We put a lot of pressure on ourselves because we knew it was those players' last go-round. This year we want to win, and we want to do well, but it's a young team. People aren't going to be expecting as much out of us. We'll have a chance to grow without there being a lot of pressure on us."

Among the top performers for Alabama's tennis teams this spring will be (left to right) Karim Zaher, Allison Eager, Alin Taranga and Cantillon Brasington.

Tressler's youth movement maintained during its fall 1995 season where players compete in individual tournament play to polish their games. Their work kept them at home in the rankings as Alabama begins its 1996 spring dual season with a number 21 national rating. It is an all-important jump start to the season as ranking means everything come May when selections are made for the field of 20 teams at the NCAA Championships. And one of its youngest, freshman Baili Camino, broke into the rankings when she debuted at number 91 in January after a rookie-season fall that included dusting off two nationally ranked players.

"I don't know that we were a Top 25 team at the beginning of the fall, but I think we were by the end," said Tressler.

It is a freshman, Camino, who is having Alabama's best initial success, though her teammates are also succeeding. Playing in her first region championships in November, the Florida native advanced to the tournament's Round of 16 in singles. At the Southeastern Conference's fall gathering in October, Camino advanced to the semifinals. It is that play that has netted her the spot at the top of the lineup, the number one singles position.

"Baili worked extremely hard in the fall and had some very good wins," Tressler said. "She also had some very good matches against some of the nation's best that she didn't quite pull out. Even when she didn't win, she was competitive."

Fellow freshman Jill Breslin, who opened her Alabama career with an 8-1 start, won two tournament championships in the flights in which she competed at Alabama's Roberta Alison Southern Intercollegiate and at the Clearwater Collegiate Fall Tennis Classic. In Alabama's opening matches this spring, Breslin has anchored the number three singles position.

But not to be outdone is Alabama's junior class which includes Allison Eager and Cantillon Brasington. After a sophomore season that included battling her way to her first collegiate win against a ranked opponent, Brasington spent her summer competing and polishing her game for her third season with the Tide. The Florida native won the Dutch Open in Emmelord, Holland. Her work pulled her up from the middle of Alabama's lineup last year to number two on the ladder for Alabama's opening spring matches.

Eager, too, has been willing and able to make her mark, particularly in doubles with Brasington as her partner. The two are nationally competitive in their pairing at number one doubles. They advanced to the Round of 16 at regionals.

The squad, eight in number, also includes newcomer Whitney Dill who joined the team in January and immediately worked her way into the early season dual lineup at either number four or number five. The top six in the early spring has included freshman Amanda Ballinger, a 1992 Prince All-America; sophomore Erin Braeuning; and, a newcomer though she is a senior, first year player Ellen Mayer.

For Joey Rivé, the advance of the 1996 dual season has been an awakening.

His first season as head coach in 1995 was his worst nightmare: Alabama won only one dual match all season, ironically by a 7-0 margin, in its third match of the season. One mere point per match scored by Alabama would have produced four more wins. It was a year of frustration and even shock for Rivé, a man who was very successful in his own collegiate and professional playing career.

But it was also a year to learn, and learn the Tide players did.

"It was hard," said Tide senior Marco Mazzotta, its anchor at number one singles for the past two seasons. "But we also learned a lot from it. We learned that we don't like that feeling anymore."

The slate was wiped clean after Alabama laid racquets to rest after the SEC Championships last April. But during the off-season, Rivé and his charges did anything but rest and wallow in their disappointment. Rivé hit the floor running, signing recruits that fit his style as a coach, players who could come on the scene and immediately shake things up. And even the older players, like Mazzotta, became rejuvenated.

"There's a new enthusiasm on the team," Mazzotta said of the mix that puts six veterans with six newcomers. "Everybody wants to do well. Everybody's pumped up. For the guys who've been on the team a while, I think it's helped us a lot to reconsider what we want to do. I think we have a great chance of being competitive this year. We've already seen that happening within the team. Everybody wants to play the highest they can (on the ladder), so everybody's knocking down everybody else out at practice everyday. It's making practice very hard, very competitive, which is a very good thing. That's what we lacked last year."

Alabama has already made up for one lack, the lack of tournament hardware it felt last season. In a program that has produced six All-America doubles duos, it is the doubles play that is the first to emerge to see daylight, thanks largely to Alabama's young upstarts.

In the fall, junior college transfer Rashid Hassan teamed with freshman Alin Taranga to win their championship flight at the Southern Collegiates in Athens, Georgia, the site of the 1996 NCAA Championships where the pair hope to find themselves, along with their teammates, come May.

Just before Christmas, Hassan, who was ranked as high as number 13 in the world in singles during his junior career, injured his knee playing basketball at the University's Recreation Center with some of his teammates. The injury has limited his play in the early going and held him out of the SEC Coaches Championships in January. But where one door might have closed, a window was opened.

Rivé teamed Taranga, a top 25-ranked South African, with his fall find, Karim Zaher who, in the late summer, dropped by Rivé's office one day and told the coach he'd like to try to play. Try he did as the duo swung their way to an SEC doubles title.

The revved-up Tide still has the season to go, but its initial rumblings have shown nothing but hope that the nightmare that was 1995 is long gone. At mid-February, the Tide was 3-1, tripling its winnings already from 1995.

Hassan's knee is now better, and his health and his play have placed him at number two in Alabama's lineup. At the middle is sophomore Chris Lopez and freshman Ariel Rivero, and switching out at numbers five and six are Taranga, who opened at 4-0 in dual play (including five sets where he didn't allow his opponent to win a single game), and Zaher.

Leading Tide To Baseball's Next Level

by John Barnes

Tide's senior catcher wants to help Alabama return to the College World Series

Leadership is an increasingly rare quality in today's athlete. Bama catcher Dax Norris not only accepts the role as team leader, he relishes it.

In his second season as the Tide's starter behind the plate, Norris is the mythical captain of Jim Wells' squad and personifies the team's never-say-die attitude.

"I've always been the type of player that takes the initiative to lead a team," said Norris. "I'm a very upbeat person and I try to spread that attitude around to my teammates."

Alabama's 1995 squad was one of not only talent, but enthusiasm. Team members who suffered through the dark years in 1993 and 1994 realized that baseball could indeed be fun again. "From what I could tell, after talking to guys like Brett Taft, guys that were here during that time, they just weren't having any fun," said Norris. "There's no doubt that there was talent during that time, but I think the game became a chore for those guys and they just kind of went through the motions. When Coach Wells got here, I saw a spark in some of the same guys who were miserable the year before."

Behind Norris' leadership, Bama embarked on one of the most dramatic turn-arounds in school history, reeling off 42 wins and ultimately, a championship at the SEC's Western Division Tournament.

"Last year, we found out early that we could play with anybody," said Norris. "When Chris (Moller) hit the home run in the ninth to complete the sweep of Florida, I think we all realized that we were legit. From then on, we never looked back and played with a tremendous amount of confidence. The score never really mattered because we always believed we would win in the end."

For the year, Norris established himself as the Tide's ironman, starting 63 of the Tide's 65 games. He finished second among SEC catchers with a .993 fielding percentage, committing only three errors in 402 total chances.

At the plate, Norris was solid, if not spectacular. Hitting .283 while driving in 34 runs, Dax set a single-season record at Alabama with 254 at-bats. He tied for the team lead with 18 doubles and finished second in runs scored with 45.

"I think I really came into my own last year," said Norris. "It was a learning experience for me because early in the year, Coach Wells and I couldn't seem to get on the same page as far as calling pitches. The system was totally different than the one I was used to in junior college. As the season went on, though, I started to get a feel for what he was calling and it helped me defensively and as a hitter because I was able to concentrate on getting my pitch rather than worrying about what calls I might miss the next inning."

Norris' development as a catcher can be traced back to his days in little league. "I've never wanted to play any other position," he said. "When I was in tee-ball, I cried for three days when the coach moved me from catcher to second base. From then on, I've worn the mask.

A native of LaGrange, Georgia, Norris had intentions of playing college baseball at Auburn. One credit short of entrance requirements, Norris enrolled at Central Alabama Community College in Alexander City. Over the next two years, Dax quietly made a name for himself, batting .333 with 76 runs batted in while striking out only 14 times in 360 plate appearances. For his efforts, he was named the team's most valuable player and was an honorable mention NJCCA All-America.

Although the Tide baseball program was in limbo at the time, Interim Coach Bobby Pierce recruited and signed Norris. A few weeks later, Jim Wells was on board and Norris had a chance to fulfill his dream of playing major college baseball.

At 5-10, Norris is short for a major college catcher, but Wells feels he makes up for it with heart and work ethic.

"Dax is the type of player every coach loves to have," said Wells. "He's a very hard worker and leads by word and by example. He's got a good sense of humor and always manages to keep the guys up. There are guys in the league who are bigger and have better arms, but Dax is the perfect mix for our team."

As the Tide begins its second season under Wells, Norris looks to continue the solid play that landed him on the NCAA East Region All-Tournament Team. He's off to a good start, earning Most Valuable Player honors for his seven-for-14 hitting, two home run performance at the Olive Garden Classic in Kissimmee, Florida. Norris led a seven-run, 14-hit attack against fifth-ranked Georgia Tech in the team's successful season opener.

"I think we're off to a good start," said Norris. "We let that North Carolina game slip away from us. They came back and beat us the way we won so many games last year. If we had to lose one like that, I guess it's better than having it happen against Auburn or LSU late in the year. Hopefully, we learned some hard lessons from that loss. It really hurt."

Currently ranked among the nation's top teams in polls by Baseball America, Collegiate Baseball and USA Today, Norris feels his team has the necessary ingredients to make it to the next level.

Only one Alabama team, Barry Shollenberger's 1983 squad, has made it to the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska.

Providing a few key elements fall into place, mostly regarding the Tide pitching staff, Norris believes his team has a legitimate shot at the promised land.

"I think we've got the right mix of veterans and talented new guys," said Norris. "Last year, we had the offense to make it to Omaha, but we just ran out of pitching. Everyone was tired and we just ran out of gas. It just shows that to make it to Omaha, you can't just have a good team, you have to have a great team. We were on the verge of being great last year, and I think we have an opportunity to reach that level this year."

After some initial misgivings, Norris feels that Jim Wells is the right man to lead Alabama baseball to the next level.

"You look at some of these programs, schools like LSU and Cal State-Fullerton, they're good every single year," said Norris. "These teams are structured for greatness. You look at the fact that each team can only offer 11.7 scholarships, so things are pretty even as far as talent goes. The difference is in the facilities and in the coaching. The teams that are great year in and year out, go in believing that they're good. They're never intimidated and believe they'll win no matter what. That's the difference between great programs and ones that are just competitive. I really believe that's the direction we're heading in."

Although Alabama returns a large part of its offense from last year, questions continue to surface regarding the Tide pitching staff. Norris views the development of Tide pitchers as one of his chief responsibilities.

Bama returns three of its four SEC starters from last year. However, off-season arm problems to John Collins and Chris Eilers, coupled with the slow development of Joel Colgrove, could spell trouble for the Tide. Even reliable Tim Young, Bama's lefty closer from a year ago, has struggled at times.

"There's no doubt we're going to have to get better on that end of things," said Norris. "We do have the potential of scoring a lot of runs, but you have to have good pitching to contend for championships. Last year, we never really had one guy who dominated, but we got great outings from guys when we really needed it. I would like to think that the way I call a game and play defense will help to give guys like Chris and Joel some confidence."

Few would argue that the success enjoyed by Alabama a year ago has raised expectations for Bama's 1996 squad. Last season few, if any, expected the team to finish much better than .500. The word "Omaha" is being thrown around quite a bit, both in the stands and in the dugout. Expectations create pressure, but Norris feels his team is up to the task.

"The really good teams, their goal every year is to make it to the CWS," he said. "Yeah, we feel some pressure, but it's pressure we put on ourselves. We were one game away from Omaha last year and we all know how it felt to fall short. If we can just remember what got us to where we are now, we'll be all right."

BAMA SCORECARD

Looking Ahead

Following a long tradition, 'BAMA presents the top upcoming senior football prospects in Alabama, for those who can't wait to start following the football recruiting wars. Alabama high school players are traditionally among the nation's best. With Alabama being strapped over the past two years, limited to 14 signees in 1995 and 12 this year, a number of schools have come into the state to nab top players.

The Alabama border should be more impervious in 1997 as the Crimson Tide will be able to sign up to 25 prospects.

Look for these names to be on lists of the top football prospects beginning next fall:

Jeffrey Aaron, quarterback, Montgomery Jeff Davis; Herman Banks, wide receiver, Hartselle; Derrick Cloud, defensive end, Birmingham Jackson-Olin; Adam Cox, running back, Jasper Walker; Kelvin Dansby, linebacker, Birmingham Ensley; Tony Dixon, running back, Pickens County; Adam Gibbs, running back, Birmingham Hoover; Phillip Milton, linebacker, Birmingham Wenonah; Brock Nutter, quarterback, Birmingham Hoover; Larry Paul, defensive end, Moody; Stanford Simmons, wide receiver, Clay County; Greg Smith, running back, Wetumpka; Jason Standridge, quarterback, Hewitt-Trussville; Rob Tate, defensive back, Birmingham Erwin; Fred Weary, lineman, Montgomery Lee; and Antoneyo Williams, running back, Tuscaloosa Central.

Coaches Visit

One of the rites of spring (and late winter) is college football assistant coaching staffs visiting or hosting the staffs of other schools. Alabama is always a favorite stop for a number of coaching staffs. Obviously, the visits are made between schools which do not play one another. During the course of spring training the Alabama coaching staff will probably have coaches from about a dozen colleges coming in to look at films, watch practices, and share philosophies.

Last year the Penn State staff visited Tuscaloosa. This year Tide assistant coaches returned the visit. Offensive Coordinator and Quarterbacks Coach Woody McCorvey, Running Backs Coach Ivy Williams, Receivers Coach Dabo Swinney, Tackles Coach Danny Pearman and Guards and Centers Coach Jim Fuller went to Penn State.

Alabama's defensive staff—Coordinator and Line Coach Mike Dubose, Linebackers Coach Jeff Rouzie and Secondary Coach Curley Hallman—went to Nebraska in search of ideas.

The defensive staff was joined on the trip to Nebraska by Strength and Conditioning Coach LeBaron Caruthers.

The 600 Club

When Alabama's men's basketball team defeated Auburn, 75-72, in Auburn on February 14, it was Bama's 600th SEC victory. Only Kentucky, which moved over the 700-win plateau this season, has more conference basketball wins.

The Wildcats are firmly entrenched as the SEC's most successful basketball team. But not only is Alabama second to Kentucky in victories, Bama is also third in all-time winning percentage in the league, behind Kentucky and relative newcomer Arkansas. Bama is fourth in SEC championships with six, behind Kentucky's 37 and the seven by LSU and Tennessee.

It will be awhile before there is another member of the 600 Club in the SEC. Tennessee, LSU and Vanderbilt are the only other schools with 500 wins and all are well short of 600.

Alabama is the only SEC team that has played more than 1,000 conference games.

A Pretty Good Neighborhood

For many of the first 82-plus years of Alabama basketball, complete statistics were not kept beyond scoring and rebounding. Items such as assists, steals and blocked shots were not tabulated until the 1960s and 1970s. Nevertheless, it is almost a certainty that no one ever did what Roy Rogers has done this year. And Roy has done it twice.

The triple-double is a fairly recent term, describing a basketball player who reaches double figures in three statistical categories. Alabama statisticians first broached the subject in late 1994 when Roy Rogers turned in 12 points, 13 rebounds and eight blocked shots in a losing effort against New Mexico State in the Pre-Season NIT.

This year, Roy got that elusive triple-double. And then to show it wasn't a fluke, he added a second one eight days later.

In a loss to Georgia in Athens, Rogers, a 6-10 senior from Linden, turned in 15 points, 12 rebounds and a phenomenal 14 blocked shots. A week later he scored a career-high 27 points and grabbed 10 rebounds while blocking 10 shots in a win over LSU.

The 14 blocked shots tied the NCAA record held by David Robinson and Shawn Bradley and broke the SEC record of 12 previously held by Shaquille O'Neal.

For his play, Rogers was named the ESPN National Player of the Week for his performance against Georgia and the SEC Player of the Week for his heroics against LSU and his 20-point, 5-rebound, 6-blocked shot effort in a road win over Auburn.

In his first year as a starter, Rogers is headed for All-SEC recognition and an almost-certain opportunity to play in the NBA.

Rocket Eight

The last SEC basketball team to go undefeated in league play was the 1956 Alabama team, which gained the nickname "The Rocket Eight." Coach Johnny Dee's final Alabama team went 14-0 in SEC play that year en route to a 21-3 record.

Coach Dee and the members of his team were reunited in Tuscaloosa the weekend of February 17. Members of the "Rocket Eight" were Jerry Harper, George Linn, Dennis O'Shea, Leon Marlaire, Dick Gunder, Billy Crews and Jim Bratton. Other members of the team, some of whom went on to star in subsequent seasons, who joined in the festivities were Jim Bogan, Scott Logan, Bill Sexton, Harold Goldstein, Dale Shuman, Jack Kubiszyn (who organized the event), Dick Bratton, Jim Fulmer, Jim Lewis, Jim Touvelle, Fred Frickey, Tom Crosby and Dave Putnam.

It was somehow appropriate that on the day the "Rocket Eight" was honored, current Alabama Head Coach David Hobbs team, depleted by injuries, defeated LSU playing only seven scholarshipped players and one walk-on.

Number Two Pick

The Alabama baseball team was predicted to finish second in the SEC Western Division in a poll of SEC coaches. LSU, which is one of the favorites to win the national championship, received 10 of the 12 first place votes to win the SEC West with Bama picking up the other two. Mississippi State was picked third, Auburn fourth, Arkansas fifth and Ole Miss sixth.

In the Eastern Division, Tennessee was the unanimous choice to win the division. LSU was a 10-2 choice to defeat Tennessee for the SEC title.

Hoover Metropolitan Stadium, just outside of Birmingham, is the site of the 1996 SEC Baseball Tournament, May 15-19. The tournament format will consist of an eight-team field that includes the top three teams from each division plus two at-large bids based on conference winning percentage. The bottom four seeds will play single elimination games on the opening day of the tournament with the winners joining the top two teams from each division in a six-team double elimination bracket.

Tournament games count in the SEC standings and towards the determination of the SEC Champion, SEC Division Champions and the league's automatic NCAA bid recipient.

Attendance Record

When Alabama opened its home baseball season this year with three games against Centenary, it is likely no one expected Bama to set a new weekend baseball attendance record. However, 5,077 went through the turnstiles at Sewell-Thomas Field to watch Bama take three wins from Centenary. The largest crowd was the 2,295 who watched on Saturday, February 17. The old record for a three-game series was 3,571, set last year against Arkansas.

The attendance record is almost certain to fall this year. The stadium currently seats 2,700, but will go to 4,700 when permanent bleachers are added along the right field foul line later this spring. (The visiting team bullpen will be moved onto the field in foul territory when the new seats are added.) Bama is boosting the size of the stadium in hopes of landing an NCAA Regional Tournament.

Torchbearers

As part of the 1996 Olympics promotion, former Olympians are taking part in this summer's Olympic Torch Relay. Among those who will participate are one current Alabama coach and one former Tide coach.

Bama Volleyball Coach Dorothy Franco-Reed, a member of the 1984 United States handball team, and former Tide Diving Coach Bob Webster, a two-time gold medal winner in platform diving (1960 and 1964), were among nine Alabamians selected for the honor.

Franco-Reed will run her leg of the relay on June 17 in West Haven, Connecticut, five miles from her hometown of Milford. Franco-Reed played both volleyball and basketball at Alabama in the late 1970s, then took up the sport of team handball, in which she participated in the Olympics, after graduation from The University.

Webster will run his leg in the Birmingham area. Webster, who is now in private business in Tuscaloosa, was also selected as one of 100 Centennial Olympians, primarily former multiple Gold Medal winners for the United States. He will be a guest of the United States Olympic Committee for a special dinner in Atlanta and recognized at the opening ceremonies and attend various Olympics events.

SEC Champions

It was not a huge upset when Dana Bleich won the 10-meter (platform diving) championship at this year's SEC swimming and diving championships in Knoxville. A year earlier as a sophomore, Bleich had finished third behind two seniors.

However, even Bleich was surprised when her point total of 594.05 was announced. That surpassed the SEC record of 588.8 and the Alabama school record held by former SEC champion Jennifer Mahaney. She also finished fifth in three-meter diving. Bleich, a two-time Academic All-SEC performer, was 11th in the NCAA Championships last year.

Alabama's other individual championship was turned in by freshman Rania Elwani, who took the 100-yard freestyle championship. Elwani set a school and pool record with her :49.61-second clocking in the event. She also had second place finishes in the 50-yard and 200-yard freestyle events and finished as the second leading individual performer in the women's meet.

Both Bleich and Elwani were named first team All-SEC by virtue of their individual championships.

The Bama women finished fourth in the SEC Championships, while the Tide men finished sixth.

In The Honor Pool

Alabama placed 18 swimmers and divers on the SEC's Academic Honor roll. To be eligible for the award, a student-athlete had to have a 3.0 grade point average for the past year or for his or her career and be at least a sophomore. Bama placed 12 women and six men on the Academic All-SEC squad.

Women honorees are Dana Bleich, Amy DeVasher, Jill DeVasher, Maria Elm, Monica Geohagan, Sarah Hickinbotham, Ann-Sofie Joensson, Laura Lloyd, April Mathis, Francine Mathot, Jenny Siegert and Karli Taylor. Men honorees are Mike Lamothe, Josh Luber, Adam McBride, Russ McDowell, Joaquin Ribeiro and Alex Voris.

Mr. President

Alabama Men's Golf Coach Dick Spybey has begun a two-year term as president of the national ruling body of collegiate golf, the Golf Coaches Association of America.

Spybey, who was national Coach of the Year in 1992, has served on the advisory board of the association for the past four years. He will have primary responsibility for administration of the organization of some 400 college golf coaches.

The Road To Number One

The reason Alabama's gymnastics team is ranked number one in the nation is the sum of its parts. Tide gymnasts held the top individual spots in three of the four gymnastics categories after five meets. Junior All-America Stephanie Woods was ranked number one in both uneven bars and balance beam. She had four scores of 9.9 or better on bars and three of 9.9 or better on beam. Senior All-America Kim Kelly ranked number one in floor exercise.

Beam is considered the most difficult of the gymnastics routines and five Tiders ranked among the nation's top ten in that event.

Packing Them In

Last year when Alabama hosted Georgia in gymnastics, the Tide set an all-time SEC record for attendance as 12,021 showed up to see Bama win with a school record 197.2 points. This year's Georgia match on March 1 is expected to attract at least 10,000. Through the first five meets of the year, Alabama had drawn the top three gymnastics crowds in the SEC this year, headed by the 9,260 for the Florida meet.

One gymnastics promotion this year was admitting fans with the price of admission the donation of a children's book. The drive netted over 1,600 books for Tuscaloosa's McDonald Hughes Community Center library.

Gymnast Lost

The Alabama gymnastics team lost Lisa Gianni for the season in only the second outing of the year. The freshman from Livingston, New Jersey, ruptured the Achilles tendon in her left leg in Bama's victories over Penn State and Nebraska on January 20. Alabama's team doctor, Les Fowler, performed surgery within 12 hours of the injury. She will be on crutches through most of the rest of this season. Rehabilitation is expected to take about nine months. The dean's list student will return for the 1997 season.

Soccer Awards

Junior goalkeeper Amy Pseja was named the Tide soccer team's Most Valuable Player as she turned in a 1.55 goals against average, 108 saves and four shutouts in 1995. She played and started in 16 games, missing four starts due to a knee injury.

Sophomore striker Taylor Eubank earned Offensive MVP, scoring 22 points on nine goals and four assists. Eubank was named to the SEC All-Tournament Team and joined teammate Pseja as a second team All-SEC selection.

Junior sweeper Nikki Kubiszyn was named Defensive MVP, as she overcame nagging injury to help guide a young Tide defense to its first division title. Kubiszyn also enjoyed membership on the SEC All-Tournament Team, and finished fourth on the team in minutes played with 1,477.

Sophomore midfielder Jill Davis garnered the Most Improved Player Award. Davis played in 12 games, starting three, and scored one goal.

Head Coach Don Staley's selection for Coaches' Award went to freshman midfielder Christine Miller, who started 18 of the 19 games she played in, and totaled eight points on three goals and two assists.

Black Gauge

Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition has made an effort to determine how blacks are represented in college athletics administration. The coalition polled colleges in various areas (graduation rates of black student-athletes, blacks in athletics administration and in overall university administration positions, etc.). The average "score" among Division I schools was 60.78. The ratings of SEC schools were:

Alabama 79, Auburn 51, Florida 73, Georgia 72, Kentucky 80, Ole Miss 78, Mississippi State 77, Tennessee 81, and Vanderbilt 69. Arkansas, LSU and South Carolina were listed as not participating.

Says It Ain't So

In our last issue we reported a story that has made the rounds for a couple of years in which a former Tide football teammate of Bill Oliver, reportedly tired of Oliver's complaints, suggested he leave so Alabama could get a coach who wanted to be at Alabama. Oliver, who left Bama to coach at Auburn, called us to say the story is not true.

A passion for printing. Your way.

EBSCO Media exists totally to serve our customers. In a high speed world of automation, electronics, and deadlines, we remain a company obsessed with old fashioned service. Your budget, your deadline, your quality standards, your satisfaction, are our obsessions. We use the tools and techniques of the modern world to accomplish these things, never losing sight of our primary goal, pleasing you.

Achieving that goal takes two important ingredients: it takes an incredibly well designed printing plant and it takes an incredibly well designed attitude on behalf of our employees. We have meticulously created and designed one of the most streamlined, productive printing plants in the nation, with plenty of room, plenty of light, and every timesaving system available.

EBSCO personnel, from sales consultants to shipping clerks, participate in company profits. Our hands-on management policies, team-like approach, and employee incentives keep our people motivated to work for you. But underneath all that, they're just special. They won't rush you off the phone or shuttle you to someone else. You'll find they not only know the business technically, they care.

NUMBER ONE

TIDE.

Bama Magazine has been giving Alabama fans the inside story on all aspects of Crimson Tide Football since 1979. Our readers get the facts and figures, but also get the story behind the story. We profile the stars and the stars-to-be, coaches, and even the stars of yesteryear as we remember Alabama tradition. And for the best and most accurate recruiting information, nothing compares.

A subscription brings you 10 full-color magazines and 14 newsletters mailed first class. We don't stop with football season, either. Keep up with all Alabama sports, August through May. Great gift idea, too!
